Miss Anna Caulfield Announces a Plan for

Showing Famous Pictures. Miss Anna Caulfield, who has ideas on What occupation in life offers man the art, gave a lecture at the National Arts best prospect of long life? The question is Club last evening on "American Art" and "Mural Art in America." She advocated Dr. Schoffeld, late lecturer and examiner a project to bring to the public the best works of American painters, since much of the public cannot well go to the paintings held in scattered places and private homes. Her way of bringing the paintings to the people is by means of lantern elides, some of which she showed. Among her slides are reproductions of John S. Sargent's paintings, which the artist sent to Miss's paintings of the Whistlers just presented to the Smithsonian Institution by C. L.

Freer, as well as reproductions of the Whist-lers now shown at the Whistler memorial exhibition in London. Miss Caulfield, after graduating from Radcliffe College, studied for four years in Europe. On her return she received an invitation to give an illustrated lecture before President McKinley and a party of distinguished guests, and Ambassador Cambos houted her Washington distinguished guests, and Ambassador Cambon invited her to Washington to give her lecture on Paris at the Embassy. Miss Cau field is a young woman of means who has enjoyed every opportunity for travel and study.

LAURIER MAY RESIGN. Canadian Premier Confronted With a Serious Cabinet Crisis.

OTTAWA, Ontario, March 8.-Hints are thrown out in some of the French newspapers of the possible resignation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the outcome of the controversy which is raging over the Separate School laws in the Autonomy bill. According to Le Canada, Sir Wilfrid has advanced the view that possibly his own retirement is what the situation calls for, that he had decided to make way two years ago, when his health had been undermined, and that should there has the further residue. and that should there be further resigna-tions his own might accompany them. The Cabinet crisis continues and rumors of resignations are frequent. It is said that the resignations of Sir William Mu-lock, Postmaster-General, and the Hon. Mr Fielding, Minister of Finance, are in the Premier's hands, but this has not been verified. It is thought Sir Wilfrid will be forced to modify the educational clauses in his bill, which practically forces separate
